

I would like to state my objection to the FCC's idea of pre-empting my state's (or any others) telephone privacy act. Our state's privacy act has a much higher standard than that proposed by the FCC. I do not wish to be contacted by any business or company that is soliciting my business. If I need a service or product I know how to use a phone book and a telephone. I greatly resent the few precious moments of peace at home being interrupted by solicitors of any kind. Please do not water down the rights of citizens to be protected from these vultures. With names and numbers being sold without the knowledge of the consumer there will be many businesses that will lie and say that these are past customers. If anything, you should be considering a sweeping reform that truly protects "we the people".
